The Empire Theater next week will offer something new in its line. "A Day and a Night" is a farce with interpolated vaudeville bits. This scheme is much better than the usual two burlesques and an olio. Fred Rider's "Moulin Rouge" was conone of the most popular shows in the Empire's list a few years ago.

XXX J. J. Rosenthal, a member of Liebler & Co.'s staff, who has been known for years as an expert advertiser, has been in Indianapolis and the smaller Indiana cities for a week making arrangements for "The Vinegar Buyer," which purports to be de-Vinegar Buyer," which purports to be de-scriptive of Indiana life and in which Ezra E. O. Ellis. They will live at Fountain Kendall impersonates the chief Hoosier. Indianians will have a week and a half of opportunities to see themselves reflected in this play. Kendall is a popular comedian, but Rosenthal has been using all his ingenuity to increase his popularity. He has sent postal cards to all of the city's retail grocers informing them that Ezra Kendall, as "The Vinegar Buyer," is open for proposals on fifteen barrels. Though he has invented some advertising dodges Rosenthal is a believer in straightforward newspaper advertising. He, as well as other theatrical business men that are closely observing, notes a tendency among the newspapers to print less so-called "gossip" in which the personalities of actors are played upon to the end of "booming the show" in which they are engaged. Many newspapers continue to use "anecdotes of the players," but the stuff is an insult to the reader, gives the actor a fictitious importance and is unfair to advertisers in reneral. Real news of the theaters always will have its proper relative place in the newspapers, but puffery cannot stand against the advance of public intelligence. Opportunities for shrewd men like Mr. enthal in the field of legitimate advertising were never so great as now. Of course, this is not to say that Rosenthal is not anxious to furnish "stories" to any newspaper that welcomes them. He shouldn't be a real flesh and blood press agent if he let any chance of that kind

There has been complimentary comment on William H. Crane's declining to make a curtain speech between the acts of "David Harum" at English's on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Mr. Robson similarly declined last week, and there are a few other actors who regularly display good taste in that manner. No special credit is due to them, for it is common sense that an actor should not leave the character to speak to his audience. Easily flattered actors-and they are a multitudeare quick to respond to the demand of the terian Church was entertained at the home foolish majority of the public for amuse- of Mrs. Thomas Whitenack on Thursday ment between acts as well as while the curtain is up. The rise of so-called "musical comedians" from the variety houses to the theaters of the first class has broken down a great deal of the dignity playhouses once had. Latter-day buffoons make personal remarks over the footlights. The Rogers Brothers, to name two actors who offend in this way, have been set up so high by their unmerited prosperity that it is habitual with them to say, "This is too easy," or "We oughtn't to take the money for this," while they are dancing together. Those "gags" are from the old days in the variety houses and are stale, besides being vulgar. It is going public takes advantage of this faniliarity, which breeds contempt, and conducts itself without any respect for the persons on the stage. It will be remem-bered that at the performances of "A Mod-ern Magdalen" at English's by Miss Bingham and her company, recently, one of Mr. Lackaye's best scenes was spoiled by the aughter of stupid persons, not all of them in the gallery. All of this, of course, is the fault of the public in general. Actors of intelligence and dignity, appearing in sensible plays, are not encouraged, while favor and money go to noisy shows. The public always can get what it wants if it pays its money for it. Conditions are imroving, no doubt, but it is a slow and

The first performance of "The Joy of Living." Edith Wharton's translation of Hermann Sudermann's "Es Lebe das Leben," at the Garden Theater, New York, has been postponed until Thursday evenof next week. Mrs. Campbell and her leading man, John Blair, disagreed about her manner of managing the stage and he resigned, making it necessary for another actor to take his part in the new play. The company appears in Pinero's "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" in the meantime.

Americans are inclined to wonder if this violet tint be the famous English complexion which has been asserted to be the most beautiful in the world. London is given credit for having originated the new paint. Paris took the fashion readily and Berlin is beginning to show violet tinted faces on the boulevards.

Art of Embroidery.

Philadelphia Record. "I almost become convinced at times," complained an elderly woman, who has been in the habit of eking out a meagre living by doing fine embroidery, "that embroidery is a lost art. Why, I used to be praised all the time, and at the great fairs and bazars my work usually received the first prize. Imagine my feelings when a piece, which I thought particularly fine, was this morning refused! And I saw a number which had just been accepted. One had the flowers done in cigar ribbons. In another chiffon was used. But the fruit designs were still worse. Little balls of scarlet chenille figured as cherries, while, as true as I'm sitting here in this chair, a grape vine design showed clusters of the fruit, and, if you'll believe me, those grapes were not built up stitch by stitch, but were mere buttons covered with silk!

The Fisherman.

The fisher's face is hard to read. His eyes are deep and still; His boots have crushed a pungent weed Oh, early lifted he the latch And sped through dew away, But when we asked him of the catch That was to mark the day, He lifts his empty hands and smiles: "I fished for hours, I fished for miles."

The fisher has an open mind, A meditative heart; He walks companioned by the wind Or sits alone, apart, Within some stream-enchanted dell. The fish about him play In sweet content. They know full well That friend of his are they. Dame Nature all his soul beguiles an Afterthought, However, She Exhausted Herself in an Attempt to Administer Punishment.

JUVENILE COURT CASES

TO WHIP HER SON.

It was rather an unusual proceeding yesterday afternoon in Juvenile Court when Mrs. Munden, mother of Alfred Munden, a boy fourteen years old, arraigned on the charge of petit larceny, refused to whip her boy when Judge Stubbs suggested that kind of punishment. 'The woman's actions irritated the judge, who curtly asked her why the boy did not go to school. She told the judge that since school began she and her husband have been unable to buy schoolbooks. This response was ridiculed by the judge, who said there was no reason why the boy could not have been in school. He said it was a known fact that books could have been got from the School Board without any cost to the parents. Without waiting for the woman to answer. Judge Stubbs turned to Mr. Bristow, one of the truancy officers, and told him to investigate the domestic affairs of the Mundens and if it is found that there is no real reason why the boy should not be in school Mr. Bristow should go before a justice of the peace and file an affidavit against the parents of the boy and prosecute them for not having him in school. The woman started to make a reply, but Judge Stubbs was thoroughly aroused and would not listen. Turning to the boy under arrest, the judge gave him a severe lecture for being brought into the court for the third time. The judge then imposed a fine of $1 and costs, which he said he would suspend if the mother would take the boy into the cellar and give him a flog-ging. For the second time she refused to do the whipping and walked hurriedly from the courtroon saying that she could get the fine stayed. The boy was not allowed to go. In a short time the mother returned cessful in getting the fine stayed and that she was willing to whip her boy. The little party went into the basement, accompanied by Patrolman Woolley. The woman who weighs more than 300 pounds, whipped the boy until his screams could be heard over the entire building. When she became fatigued she gave the whip to Woolley and asked him to finish the whipping. Before Mrs. Munden left the police station, Truant Officer Bristow served a legal notice on her that her case will be taken up by the truancy board and that she will be required to be present at the investigation. Two small boys of good appearance were arraigned on the charge of stealing papers. The boys were caught Sunday morning stealing Journals from residences on East New York street. They pleaded guilty and were fined $5 and costs. The fine was made heavy on account of the numerous reports of paper thefts received by the police. Judgment was suspended on account of it being the first time the boys had been ar-barely able to look over the iron railing in front of them, pleaded guilty to stealing a basketful of carpenter tools. Part of the tools were recovered. Judge Stubbs did not care to punish the boys because they were so small. He told the parents if they would repay the owner of the tools for those that could not be found he would allow the boys to go home. It was esti-mated that the lost tools were worth $2, which was paid by the parents.

The cases against Lincoln Cowger, Bur-ley and Sheda Charleston, Samuel Baker and Richard Sains, five negro boys charged with stealing plumbing fixtures from North Side residences, and Samuel Bornestine and Joseph Cohen, two junk dealers, charged with receiving stolen goods, were disposed of by sending all to the grand jury. This case has been postponed four times in court on account of the difficulty encountered by the court in getting the facts. James ("Porkchops") Holt, a colored boy who has become a familiar figure in Police and Jeuvenile Courts, was sent to the grand jury as an incorrigible.

SHOT AT BROTHER-IN-LAW.

Charles Schwartz Under Arrest on Serious Charge.

Charles Schwartz, living at 1361 Shelby street, attempted to take the life of his brother-in-law, Fred Strangemeier, also living at the same place. Schwartz was not successful in killing Strangemeier, but the latter's face is badly powder-burned and shows plainly that his brother-in-law fired at him at close range. Schwartz was arrested for shooting with intent to kill by Bicycle Policemen Hull and Griffin.

It was learned that Schwartz and his brother-in-law have not been on friendly terms for the past month. On several occasions it was said Schwartz has tried to kill Strangemeier. Yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock Strangemeier came home and as he walked through the kitchen door Schwartz fired twice close to his face. Schwartz was hiding behind a door and was waiting for the arrival of Strange-meier. When Schwartz fired the two shots meier. When Schwartz fired the two shots Bible readings at the Propylacum this ing of United States marines was effective fell to the floor, thinking that evening and to-morrow afternoon and tive in maintaining free transit over the he had been wounded. Mrs. Schwartz, evening mother of Charles, rushed into a room and began to scream. Schwartz ran to the front fence and waited for the approach of a policeman that he might be arrested. When he saw Hull and Griffin coming up the street he ran into the house and upstairs, where he threw the pistol under some bed clothes.

SEEK LARGE ATTENDANCE.

Bass, Mrs. Hattie A. Ryder, Mrs. Matilda Delegates to the Conference of the State Board of Charities.

A special effort is being made by the committee on invitation, of which Rev. M. L. Haines is chairman, to have the delegates in attendance at the State Conference of Charities and Correction, representative of the denominations and institutions throughout the State. Letters will be sent to pastors of churches, presidents of benevolent societies and boards of institutions, asking that they appoint a sufficient number of delegates to assure two or more representatives present at each of the five main sessions of the conference. The committee hopes in this way, with the aid of the half rates offered by the railroads, to secure a larger and more general assemblage of workers than at any previous conference. The letters will be sent out in the name of the whole committee, consisting of the following: Rev. M. L. Haines, chairman; Charles W. Moores, S. P. Sheerin, Mrs. Margaret Kelly, C. F. PERDOMO IS OUR FRIEND

COLOMBIA'S NEW ARMY COMMANDER LIKES THE UNITED STATES.

Hopes to Soon Pacify the Country and Expedite Construction of the Panama Canal.

PANAMA, Colombia, Oct. 17.-General Perdomo yesterday notified the foreign consuls here that he had assumed the functions of supreme commander of Colombian forces on the isthmus, as well as those of the minister of state. General Perdomo is a man of middle age and his demeanor is modest and unassuming. He has taken an active part in the military affairs of Colombia during the last thirty years and this, notwithstanding the fact that he is one of the richest ployed by Albert Gall, was arrested last land and cattle owners in the departments of Tolima and Cundinamarca. To-day he is the right-hand man of Minister of War

In an interview Perdomo said: "I have been very agreeably impressed with the American forces on the isthmus. At Colon the American consul visited me and was very kind and amiable. The commanding officer of the American marines placed a guard of honor on the train which brought me over and this guard was put under my orders. Acting Superintendent Prescott, of the railroad, offered me his private car for the trip. I must say that I felt quite safe while coming over from Colon. As a result of my conversation with the American consul I have absolutely no fear that any difficulty will arise between Colombia and the American forces here or the railroad company. I think the landisthmus. I expect soon to have a powerful army here and will then clear the railroad line of guerrilla bands, whose only object is to create complications between will be able to relieve the American forces doing shore duty on the isthmus, who, from what some of their officers have told me, must be anxious to return to their homes. I am a great friend of the United States. and I admire that country. I and all Colombians favor the construction of a canal by the Americans and my principal object in pacifying the isthmus is to make possible a meeting of the Colombian Congress to consider the canal bill. On the arrival here of our newly-acquired cruiser, the Bogota, from San Francisco, and she is expected shortly. I will concentrate my forces in this department and begin my campaign immediately. The Colombian government can send 50,000 men here, but 10,000 men is all I require. The Chilean cruiser Presidente Pinto arrived here this morning from Chile.
